

To whom it may concern,

I'm excited to see your ad for the developer position. If you're looking for a highly motivated Jr. Web developer driven by a passion for innovation and problem solving please consider my resume.

From a young age I have always known that i wanted to be a developer. I have been Cisco certified i have and supported users for large companies but nothing compares to my drive for development. As one of the analyst working on a new service desk operation for a large corporation I have helped analyze, design solutions, implement, and document procedures for problems faced frequently.

My technical expertise in web development is in open source languages that are used by most websites/web applications. I have learned many best practices from my time at Buffalo State College but the countless hours spent developing as my favorite hobby have given me much more.

I believe i would fit perfectly as a Jr. web developer with your company and an asset that will help the company reach new levels.

Sincerely,

Jose Sebastian Manunta
